COMMENTARY

The author says too many TV docudramas misinform and mislead too many viewers

For several years now, I've had the eerie feeling that whenever I look at the entertainment pages of the daily newspaper, I'm reading about television movies and miniseries based on events I just finished reading about on the front page. "The Atlanta Child Murders." "Sadat." "Adam." Blind Ambition. "Choices of the Heart." "Lois Gibbs and the Love Canal." Robert Kennedy and His Times.

I know that many of our great works of literature—including many Shakespearean masterpieces—were similarly rooted in reality, based on actual incidents and characters. But most of these works were written decades—in many cases, centuries—after the events they depict. Too many of the recent "docudramas" and "real-life stories" are being created and presented to the public before the controversies surrounding the events themselves have actually been settled.

What difference does that make?

A lot.

Too many people, I fear, think these fictionalized movies are true; too many people, I fear, are forming—and then transmitting—their final impressions of the major social and political events of our time on the basis of fictionalized movies, rather than on the basis of historical fact.

Many Egyptians said, for example, that the made-for-television movie "Sadat" distorted and trivialized Sadat's motives for signing a peace treaty with Israel. Egyptians also alleged a number of other inaccuracies, ranging from costumes and accents to the depiction of Sadat embracing his wife in public (something an Egyptian man would not do) to the portrayals of Israeli Premier Menachem Begin, King Farouk and former President Gamal Abdul Nasser. Because of these objections, Egypt said it would ban everything produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures, the maker of "Sadat." Relations between Egypt and Israel were already strained. What effect might this ban have on future Israeli-Egyptian relations? In the always-volatile Mideast, that is no small concern.

Television isn't the only culprit in the matter of yesterday's news becoming today's entertainment, of course. Movies made for theatrical release also seem to draw on real-life events with increasing frequency these days—as witness "The Killing Fields" and "The Falcon and the Snowman." Some of these movies—and some similar productions for public television and even, on occasion, for network television—are almost as historically accurate as they are dramatically effective. And even if they're not 100 per cent accurate—in the theater or in your living room—well, in a few instances, perhaps it doesn't matter much. Perhaps it isn't crucial to the survival of Western civilization that the viewers of "Cross Creek," a 1983 movie based loosely on the life of author Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, probably came away from their neighborhood Bijou with a grossly distorted view of the Rawlings character as a "1980s . . . tough-minded, entirely self-sufficient woman," as one critic described the lead character in the film. But I think it could be damaging for most people to think Sadat made peace with Israel for personal reasons rather than as a matter of bold national policy. Or that "Choices of the Heart" told the true, →

If You Can't Beat 'em, Then Fool 'em

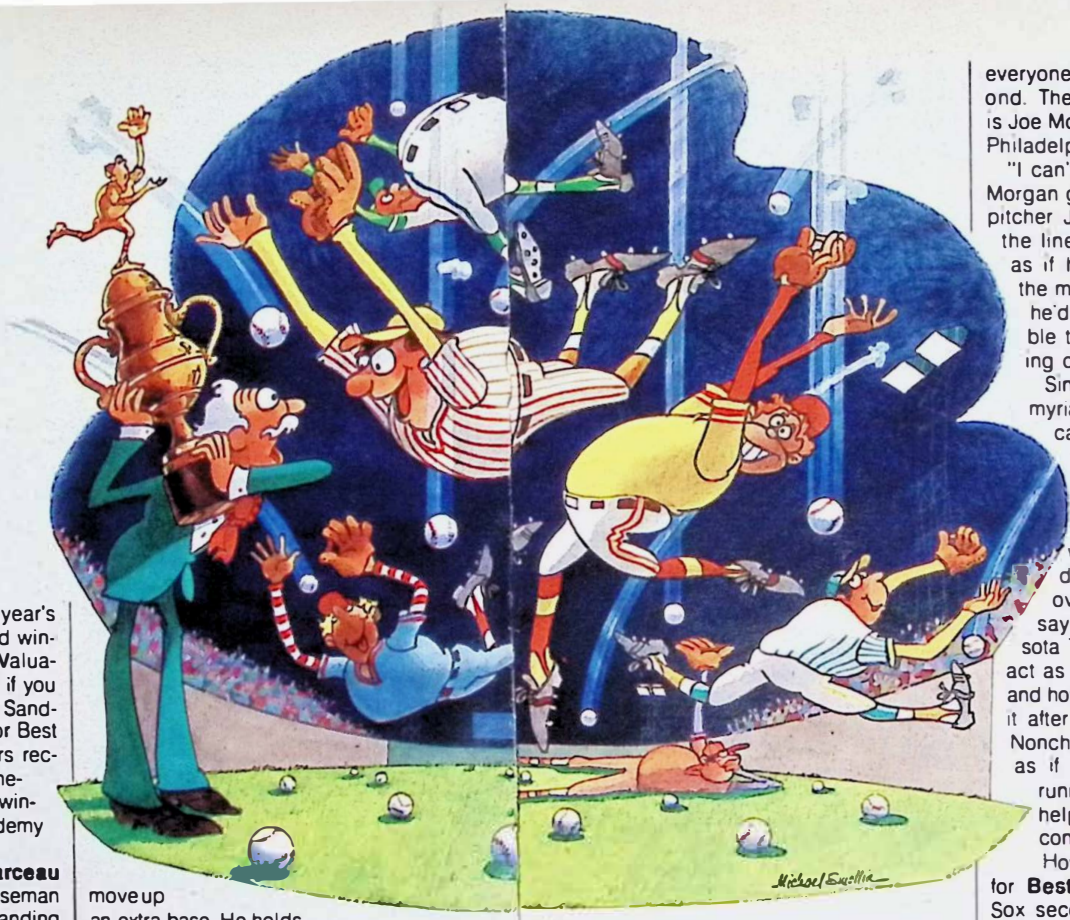
Acting ability can be as vital to a ballplayer as his bat and glove

By Gary Morgenstein



Quick now: Can you name last year's American League Cy Young Award winner? The National League's Most Valuable Player? You're absolutely right if you said Willie Hernandez and Ryne Sandberg. OK, how about the winner for Best Actor? Well, why not? Most players recognize that good acting can sometimes be the difference between winning and losing. The Baseball Academy Awards are long overdue.

Our first Oscar is the Marcel Marceau Award. San Diego Padres third baseman Graig Nettles is adroit at "just standing there by third on a ball hit to left when there's a runner on second," says Kansas City Royals third-base coach Mike Ferraro. "He'll act as if he's going to let the outfielder's throw go home, then all of a sudden he'll reach up, grab the throw, cut it off and fire to second to get the runner trying to stretch the single into a double." Equally adept at mime is Boston Red Sox right fielder Dwight Evans, who'll drift back on a long fly with a runner on base. "He'll go back to the warning track, pounding the glove and acting like he's gonna catch the ball," says former Red Sox coach Eddie Yost. "Then he'll whirl around and catch the ball after it has bounced off the wall. The runner doesn't move up an extra base. He holds, thinking Evans will catch it."

But the Oscar winner is second baseman Marty Barrett of Boston. "One time, there's one out and a runner at first," says Yost. "The batter swings and Barrett's just standing there, watching the ball and following it into the first-base stands. Well, the runner sees Barrett watching the ball and so he starts watching the ball go into the stands, foul, only the ball turns out to be a line drive into right, a hit, and we get a force at second because the runner is still trying to see where the ball landed in the stands."

Kenny Singleton, who was the Baltimore Orioles designated hitter, deserves an Oscar for Creative Use of Slowness. "Kenny doesn't run well, so if he hits a chopper in front of the plate, he knows there's no way he'll ever beat the throw to first," says Orioles catcher Rick Dempsey. "What he'll do is, as soon as he sees the ball bouncing toward a fielder, he'll start hopping around and jumping and grabbing his foot, as if he fouled the ball off his instep. And the ump'll give him a foul-strike call 99 out of a hundred times."

Actors playing the role of base runner are really actor-directors, since they direct a cast of coaches, managers, trainers, umpires and opposing infielders, who gather around a runner who's just beat out an infield hit and finds he's "pulled a muscle." The runner tries to convince everyone that he is too sore to steal second. The Oscar winner in this category is Joe Morgan, who perfected the art with Philadelphia.

"I can't tell you how many times I saw Morgan go into his routine," says Phillies pitcher Jerry Koosman. "He'd run down the line, beating out a hit and then act as if he'd pulled a muscle. He'd get the manager and trainer out there and he'd limp around, stretch, then hobble to first. Next thing, he's off stealing on the first pitch."

Since baseball theater demands a myriad of skills, some players are called upon to perform pratfalls worthy of Lou Costello. Outfielders who want to persuade umps that the sinking liner wasn't trapped, but was actually caught, will often engage in tumbling, diving performances. "I like to roll over, maybe a couple of times," says Mickey Hatcher of the Minnesota Twins, "then jump up and down, act as if I really went all out to catch it and how could anyone say I didn't catch it after I went through all this trouble? Nonchalantly throwing the ball back in as if you don't have to worry about runners since it is, of course, an out, helps because it shows you have confidence in your performance."

However, the winner of the Oscar for Best Stunt goes to Chicago White Sox second baseman Julio Cruz. "I put on the hit-and-run against Chicago," recalls Detroit Tigers manager Sparky Anderson, "and the ball's smacked on the right side. Cruz dives and then leaps up with the glove in the air, as if he caught it. So our runner, Glenn Wilson, not wanting to get caught off base, runs back to first. Only Cruz never had the ball. It was a clean hit and the right fielder grabbed it and forced Wilson at second."

Outfielder Jay Johnstone gets the award for Best Stage Design. "If a ball is lost in the ivy in Wrigley Field, it's an automatic ground-rule double," says Johnstone, who played for the Cubs last year. "So if a really fast runner hits it into the ivy and I know he'll get a triple, I'll → just throw my hands in the air and say 'Hey, I don't see it,' even as I'm trying to nudge the ball back under the leaves."

Sure, it's easy to act if you have a brilliant script, like Best Screenplay winner Sparky Anderson. Anderson says, "If an opposing pitcher's in a real groove, I'll go out to the ump and start double talking, saying the first thing that comes to mind and trying to stay out there as long as I can just to disrupt the pitcher's rhythm."

But what about the sights, sounds and technical aspects of the profession? The Academy wants to commend the following winners:

Best Sound, Rick Dempsey, Baltimore, for innovative ways of getting foul-tip calls: "The sound a ball makes when it's been foul-tipped is the same sound a ball makes when it hits off the finger, then pocket, of my catcher's glove. So all I have to do is say, 'foul tip,' and the play's happened so fast anyway the umpire'll usually give me the call."

Technical Excellence, Don Baylor, New York Yankees, for his method of purposely getting on base via hit-by-pitched-ball: "A black player has to do a bit more to convince the ump he's been hit than a white player," Baylor says. "See, a white player's skin turns pink or red when he's hit, but you don't see the mark as easily on a black. So not only do I have to get myself hit on the forearm, but I have to make sure the ball really ricochets away so there's no doubt it hit me."

Costume Design, Mel Hall, Cleveland Indians. Hall brings six batting gloves to the plate when he hits, even though he, like other humans, has only two hands. But he doesn't wear them. Hall just shoves the batting gloves in his back pockets, three in each. Why? "I put three in each back pocket so that when I go into my home-run trot, the gloves can wave to the crowd," explains Hall. A new rule will prevent Hall from stuffing his pockets full of gloves this season.

Now that the Awards have again cut into the 11 o'clock news, it's time to wrap things up by presenting the award everyone's been waiting for, Best Actor. And the winner is Jimmy Piersall, who also won Best Choreography for running around the bases backwards when he hit his 100th career homer more than 20 years ago. Mr. Piersall, will you quickly tell your story so this show doesn't intrude upon the Late, Late Movie, too?

"I was with Boston and we were playing the Senators at old Griffith Stadium where if the ball landed on the fly in the Washington bullpen, it was a ground-rule double. Bottom of the ninth, score tied, two out, runner on first, and Pete Runnels, batter for Washington, hits a shot off the center-field fence and it caroms to me, playing center, on the fly, right in front of the Senators bullpen. Now I know there's no way I can ever throw the runner out at home so, with my back to the ump, I flip the ball into the bullpen and umpire John Rice calls it a double. Don't think I've ever seen an entire bullpen so mad, at the ump and especially at me, since I kept insisting, 'Sure it went in on the fly.' Rice threw the whole bullpen out of the game."

Mr. Director, the closing credits, please. (END)

By 23, She Had It Made. Months Later, Shelly Burch Broke

It took working 17 hours a day on One Life to Live and a Broadway play to teach Shelly Burch that success can be even harder to handle than obscurity

By Joanmarie Kalter

Trix Rosen

At the age of 5, she was one of Sen. Barry Goldwater's favorite family friends; she speaks laughingly now of the time she threw his Air Force uniform into the toilet as a prank. At 14, she stood in the Oval Office while her father, Dean Burch, was sworn in as Counselor to President Nixon. He had also been chairman of the Republican Party, and would stay on to serve President Ford. There were weekends at Camp David, swimming, skeet shooting, zipping around the compound in a golf cart. She came to New York at 18 to pursue a childhood dream—a career as an actress, singer and dancer. And by 23, she had made it—creating a lead role in the hit musical "Nine," which she played by night, and the part of Delila Buchanan in ABC's One Life to Live by day. It had been a childhood lived in the shelter of Washington's power elite and had become a young adulthood graced by beauty, direction and talent.

Then, not yet 24, Shelly Burch broke.

"I was working 17 hours a day," she says now. "I was exhausted. I had achieved my goal—and it was disappointing. It wasn't romantic, it was just hard work."

Burch is seated at a corner table in a Mexican restaurant, toying nervously with a small bowl of hot sauce, lighting a cigarette, then putting it out after a few tentative puffs. "There was so much pressure," she says. "Pressure to do the show every night, to keep my voice. The soap was new to me and I had a strong storyline. It was a strain I just wasn't prepared for. What I felt was like a mid-life crisis. I realized this wasn't all I had wanted it to be."

It has been two years now since she hit that low point, since she quit Broadway to concentrate on her daytime role, and it has been "two years of feeling negative," she says. For much of that time, she stopped singing, rarely auditioned. And only recently has she begun to climb her way back up. "It was a painful lesson," she says. "I isolate myself sometimes and keep myself private. I had pushed so hard to succeed that I had little else. But I'm learning to reach out. Because I realized that you don't live on stage, you live off stage. There is something else to life. There is something else." She stops, surprised, perhaps, by the force of her own conviction, and then adds, more gently: "You have to be happy with yourself."

For Burch, happiness now is getting together with one or two close friends. "As a politician's daughter, Shelly is privately very outgoing, and publicly very private," says her best friend, Emily Conable, the daughter of longtime congressman Barber Conable Jr. of New York. Perhaps that explains why Burch says no, with a shudder, to the publicity agent who invites her to a see-and-be-seen party; why she welcomes a photographer into her home, poses warmly on cue, but seems rushed—as if the occasion were more to be endured than enjoyed. Underneath that polish and poise, it seems, is an almost painful shyness. "In a political family, you are constantly pulled into the spotlight to behave appropriately, to look stable," says Conable. "I hated it, and Shelly wasn't so pleased with it, either. She knows how to act in public, and it's good training, but it's not where she's most comfortable."

No, where Shelly Burch is most comfortable is by the side of a piano, belting out a song. As she walks down the street to the home of her voice coach, she seems tense, keeping her beauty in disguise; she wears loose-fitting jeans, a worn and dusty jacket, a cap pulled low, no makeup and glasses. Yet as she rehearses the song she'll sing at an upcoming audition, she loosens up, flings off the glasses, stands taller. When she masters it, her full, rich, dramatic soprano soaring, her face is glazed with sweat—and glowing. And while on other occasions she has seemed restless, today she wants to linger. "Would you like to hear the song I sang in 'Nine'?" she asks at the end of the lesson, putting down her jacket. "This is my song," she says with a proud laugh, and heads back again to the piano.

Like many young actresses, Shelly Burch has reluctantly decided to put her professional goals ahead of her personal ones—a husband and family, to be precise. With voice lessons, dance classes, gym workouts, auditions and the soap, there's little time. "It's difficult for Shelly to find the right person when she's working so hard," says Robert S. Woods, who plays her ex-husband, Bo, on One Life. And Burch admits, "It's real lonely." In the meantime, she lives in a small apartment near Manhattan's theater district, with her three cats, tattered sofa, threadbare easy chair, grimy coffee table, bicycle, books and framed family photos. "Someday, my prince will come," she says, lifting her arms. Perhaps not the kind her mother has in mind—"a potential President, you know, the kind with every hair in place," as her friend, Emily Conable, laughingly puts it. But she would like to meet some people outside the theater world.

After almost three years on the soap, Burch feels she has learned a lot, but that "it may be time to move on." Delila, her character, has gone from Scarlett O'Hara-self-absorbed to Melanie Wilkes-sweet. Says Burch, "I think I'm kind of boring now." Blocking out a scene on the set one day, Delila, who has undergone daytime TV's first embryo transplant, has to hold up some baby clothes and say, in all seriousness, "I wish it didn't take nine whole months!" Burch winces. But, a few moments later, standing off set and toying with her necklace—a gold cross her mother has given her and a pair of tiny toe shoes sent by a fan—she isn't sure what her next step will be.

"There's something Shelly's still striving for, searching for," says Bob Woods. Is she happy? "Well, not very. She feels a lot of conflict between finding fulfillment personally and being successful in this business." But at least Burch knows now about the pressure and hard work behind every performance, and the value of a grounded life beyond it. As she says, "There may be pain, but I'm growing."

The Magic Number?

A couple of weeks ago, NBC's Hill Street Blues unreeled its 100th episode. When a series has that many shows (the equivalent of four and a half seasons) in the can, it's perhaps time to wonder if it isn't running out of ideas. "Series tend to run out of ideas long before episode 100," says Bruce Weitz (above, left), the Hill's surly Det. Mick Belker. "But our writers are astonishing. Their stuff is getting fresher." How long can the Blues keep going? Weitz thinks

Party Line

Charles in Charge co-star Willie Aames (right) has thrown a party or two in his young life. And now he's putting his hard-earned experience into a book. "It's a cookbook that tells you how to entertain large groups," says Aames. Researching it, though, wasn't always a picnic. To lend his tome authenticity, Aames threw a barbeque in Connecticut for some 40 people. The inevitable came down in buckets: "We cooked the steaks in the middle of a pouring rain," Aames recalls. The book is scheduled for release later this year.

A Ford for the Future

That's what viewers will be treated to next season in "Generation," an ABC TV-movie (and pilot for a possible series) set at the end of 1999. To help achieve a fast-forward-15-years feeling, the Ford Motor Company sent over nine futuristic "concept vehicles" for use in the filming. "We're always thinking about the year 2000," says Ford planner Tom Tilker. "We're designing cars now that will go on sale in 1991—and they've got to look good for 10 years after that." Things look fine enough to "Generation" co-star Drake Hogestyn. "If this show goes to series," says Hogestyn, eyeing the sleek, mid-engine, Ghia-designed prototype he's pictured with, above, "this baby is mine!"

Higher Education

"I do a lot of concerts at colleges," says comedian Don Novello—better known as Vatican gossip columnist Father Guido Sarducci (below). This month, on Showtime, you can catch the naughty padre's sardonic reflections on the modern church in a special taped at the University of California's Santa Barbara campus. Does the not-so-good father detect a new wave of conservatism among today's undergraduates? Not really. "I even did well at Notre Dame," he says. "Things haven't changed too much [in college life]. The students still cheer when I mention beer."

American Parade

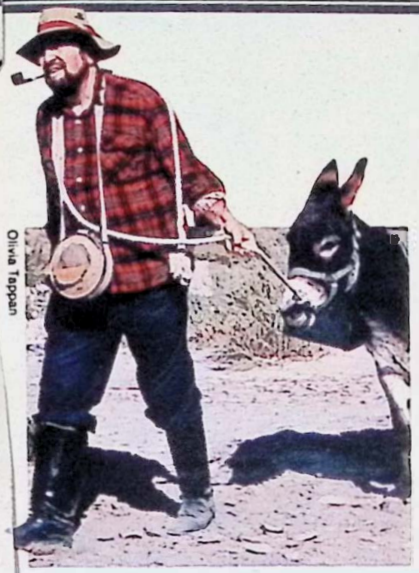
He first guided viewers through the backwaters and bistros of the U.S.A. 14 years ago. Now, humorist Jean Shepherd (above, right) is back with another series of Jean Shepherd's America for PBS. Each week, Shepherd plumbs a different part of the American experience, exploring such bastions of lore as Death Valley, Guam (Guam?), the Old South and the Okefenokee Swamp. "Whoa, Death Valley," he exclaims. "I trudged over salt flats there, and my shoes started falling apart—leather boots. It just dissolved them. I realized then why they call it Death Valley."



Olivia Tappan

Series Doubts

Patrick McGoohan (right) returns to TV next month as a Colonial New England magistrate in "Three Sovereigns for Sarah" on PBS's American Playhouse, but he is definitely not planning to do another weekly series. "I've done enough, don't you think? Once you do a successful series," he says, "you get branded. It's going to take me the rest of my life to live down Secret Agent and The Prisoner." McGoohan admits he's "very pleased that people remember The Prisoner" (now a cult favorite), but as for his short-lived 1977 medical series Rafferty, "I prefer to have that one buried with a stake through its heart."

You've Seen Him Type; Now Hear Him Talk!

Heretofore, super producer Stephen J. Cannell (The A-Team, Riptide,) has only been seen on the screen silently typing the company logo that airs on his shows' closing credits. This month, Cannell (left) is co-hosting "On Top All Over the World," a syndicated salute to U.S. entertainment. "It's very rare," he admits, "that a writer-producer gets to feel what an actor goes through. The worst part is not knowing whether the feedback is accurate. People kept saying, 'Gee, you're doing great.' And I'd say to myself, 'God, I'm bombing!' "

The Comeback Kids

The return of good guy Hogan McCleary, disillusioned from his eight-month stay in Hollywood, figures to stir the plot on Search for Tomorrow. Now that he's back at work at Lloyd Kendall's newspaper, watch for McCleary (played by David Forsyth, above) to butt heads with his boss, keep his distance from former love Sunny Adamson—and find himself at odds with alluring Liza Sentell. . . . Meanwhile, over on All My Children, it's homecoming time for another familiar face: Tasia Valenza, who plays Dottie Martin. Valenza has been conspicuous by her absence for the past month, what with Dottie having fled Pine Valley to get her act together. Not letting any grass grow under her feet, Valenza took advantage of the hiatus to appear in the upcoming feature film "Rappin'." Among the male stars of that film, incidentally, is Charles Flohe, best remembered as Preacher on the departed Edge of Night.

Buon Giorno, Fabiana

With summer right around the corner, One Life to Live is heating up a summerlike young-love storyline involving the fair Giulietta from Venice. Italian actress Fabiana Udenio, who plays Giulietta, so impressed the show's executives during their stint in Venice that they have now brought her to New York for a major role on the soap. Says series head writer Sam Hall, "Giulietta will show herself to be older than her years in a romantic storyline with Bo Buchanan," played by Robert S. Woods. ## Gridiron Gleanings

For a man who figures to be football's most sought-after free agent (broadcasting division), CBS's John Madden (above) is pretty nonchalant about the ins and outs of the TV industry. "I don't know how the business works," he says. "You know that CBS building in New York, the one they call 'Black Rock'? I haven't been in there in four years." Madden's contract expires at the end of the '85 NFL season. . . . Maybe it's time to say something nice about the USFL. This year, the league opted to use instant replays to settle disputed calls. According to league spokesman Jim Byrne, the USFL "anticipated that more than 90 per cent of the challenged calls would be correct." That's uncanny. It turns out that in the first four weeks of play 10 calls were challenged—and one of them was overturned, a 90-per-cent efficiency rate for the USFL zebras. Only a cynic would label that a self-fulfilling prophecy. . . . Whatever the experiment's outcome, we still think that recourse to replays adds much to the games and the telecasts. Just one quibble: only games carried on ABC and ESPN make use of the tapes to second-guess the officiating. Put another way, only the teams on TV (i.e. Doug Flutie's New Jersey Generals and whoever they're playing that week) get the advantage of better officiating. Is that fair? . . . Finally, we asked a pair of NFL stars—Doug Cosbie and Anthony Dickerson of the Dallas Cowboys—whether they watched the USFL. "I don't plan my Sundays around it," says Cosbie, the Pokes' All-Pro TE, "but, sure, I watch it." Dickerson agrees. "I enjoy watching the Houston Gamblers. [Their QB] Jim Kelly [below] could play anywhere."

Cheers

To Tonight Show host Johnny Carson (above), for shaving off his mercifully short-lived beard.

Jeers

To Sen. Jesse Helms and the organization Fairness in Media, for their campaign urging conservatives to buy enough CBS Inc. stock to gain control over the network and alter what they feel is the liberal slant of its newscasts. It's preferable that the news not be beholden to any group; and that instead of voting by proxy, viewers vote with their dials. (And, by that measure, even former newscaster Helms must admit that the stock of CBS's nightly news is Rather high right now.)

Jeers

To ABC's 20/20, for its report that asked the journalistic non-question of the year—"Pro Wrestling: Is This a Sport?" Actually, in the second half of the segment, correspondent John Stossel did investigate the legitimate issues of whether wrestling is a monopoly and whether wrestlers get blackballed. But those explorations were lost amid the how-to of phony body slams and Stossel getting his bell rung by grappler Dave Schultz. On the other hand . . .

Cheers

To Vince McMahon Jr., wrestling promoter and host of USA Network's Wrestling TNT. Asked by Stossel whether wrestling is a legitimate sport, McMahon didn't equivocate for a second. Said he, with an almost straight face: "It's not perhaps a legitimate sport in terms of what someone would think of in a traditional way." That's telling it like it is, Vince.

Cheers

To Alexander H. Cohen. As producer of ABC's "Night of 100 Stars II," Cohen got 308 luminaries (such as Deidre Hall, Bob Mackie and Linda Gray, below, l.-r.) onto one stage for a remarkable show that raised more than $840,000 for the Actors' Fund. The good news: since the fund's goals have been met, there's currently no need for more "Nights"—which is also the bad news!

Among its features are "Davercise"; a lingerie fashion show; and Dave disrupting the performances of lookalike Cyndi Laupers, Willie Nelsons and Billy Idols. "It's a cross between 'Ben Hur' and 'The Wizard of Oz'," says Roth's director and co-writer Pete Angelus. "It's a definite alternative," echoes Roth. "We just don't know to what."

Half Notes

Van-Zant's clip for "I'm a Fighter" is definitely a video with impact: it features middleweight boxing champ Marvelous Marvin Hagler sparring and shadowboxing to the music. Does this mean that Hagler is about to unveil his vocal talents, too? Not likely. "I'll leave that up to Joe Frazier," he counters. . . . Willie Nelson and Ray Charles are devoted chess players as well as being noted singer-songwriters. When the duo got together to cut their current country hit, "Seven Spanish Angels," they also squared off at the chess table. As Nelson tells it, Charles (who's been blind since age 6) wanted to make their match a little more even: he demanded that Willie play him with the lights turned off. END

Networks Give Guarantees to New Fall Shows

Although their fall schedules won't be announced until about May 1, the three networks have already made definite commitments to several new shows.

NBC has guaranteed to broadcast 44 episodes, over a two-year period, of Steven Spielberg's Amazing Stories, a half-hour series about the supernatural. It is planned for telecast at 8 P.M. (ET) on Sundays. Early episodes will be directed by filmmaker Martin Scorsese and by Spielberg. NBC has also signed for six episodes of Golden Girls, a comedy from Susan Harris, creator of Soap, about three women in their 50s who quit work and "retire" to Miami. Betty White and Rue McClanahan head the cast. Another NBC commitment is to an hour-long Hal Linden vehicle, Blacke's Magic, in which Linden plays a magician who solves crimes. A mid-season guarantee for 13 shows has also been given to All Is Forgiven, a comedy from the producers of Cheers. It stars Bess Armstrong.

CBS's new Twilight Zone anthology is certain to be on the fall schedule. In addition, the network has ordered three shows for six-episode summer debuts. They are: I Had Three Wives, a detective comedy with Teri Copley and Shanna Reed; Hometown, a one-hour drama along the lines of "The Big Chill"; and One Hogan Place, a half-hour comedy about a woman assistant district attorney. CBS will also launch its new prime-time newsmagazine in August. It will be called West 57th.

ABC has given fall commitments to The Colbys of California, a Dynasty spinoff, and to Dark Mansions, a gothic serial with Loretta Young. —Richard Turner

NBC Seeks Better Score

NBC News, hoping to improve its score in the ratings game, has hired a composer. John Williams, who wrote the music for "ET," "Jaws" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark," will produce a new theme for Nightly News and appropriate variations for other NBC news shows. Tom Wolzien, an NBC vice-president, says the network decided to kill the present "news noise synthesizer sound" because "it was driving us nuts, and the viewers as well, we suspect."

The other two networks also are planning changes in the look of their news programs. CBS is working on a new set that will include a camera lift. It may not be ready until the end of the summer. ABC's new set won't be ready until next winter. It will be on two levels.

Y'all Come Back, Hear?

A.D. director Stuart Cooper considered the performances of Anthony Andrews (Nero), Ava Gardner (Agrippina) and Anthony Zerbe (Pilate) to be so "absolutely outstanding" in that NBC miniseries that he's asked all three to join the cast of his newest NBC project, "The Long Hot Summer," based on tales by William Faulkner. The British Andrews, we're told, can do "an absolutely perfect Southern accent."

Pay Now, Pray Later

Last fall, activist Mitch Snyder fasted 51 days to obtain Federal aid for his shelter for the homeless in Washington, D.C. Recently, Snyder got a new benefactor, CBS, which plans to make him the subject of a TV-movie now in development. "The first check was for $10,000," says Snyder. "We spent that in 10 minutes to pay off a loan we'd gotten to pay our electric bill. The other day we got $40,000 and now we're out of debt. We get another $100,000 if the project goes into production." Snyder and his group will have no control over the script. "We'll just hold our noses and pray," he says.

Risky Business

Among the more experimental series pilots ABC is considering for next fall is "The Faculty," which stars Blair Brown (Space) as a high-school teacher. One technique the producers are toying with is letting the characters talk directly to the camera. ABC Entertainment president Lewis Erlicht admits it's a show "we wouldn't have ordered three years ago." Another pilot, "Mr. Sunshine," is a bitter-sweet comedy with Jeffrey Tambor as a college professor who, blinded in an accident, remains angrily self-sufficient. Erlicht remains wary of the concept. "We have to make sure," he says, that viewers "are not uncomfortable."

Best Test

The Best Times, NBC's new limited-run series about high-school life, seems to be trying to earn an A for authenticity. Before shooting began, three of its stars—Jay Baker, 24, David Packer, 22, and Darren Dalton, 20—spent a day in California high schools, posing as students, which is what they play on the show. All three passed, undetected. Whether Times makes the grade as a series next fall is questionable, though: network executives are worried that its appeal might not be broad enough to grab the alumni crowd.

Title Bout

CBS's TV-movie biography of boxer Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini is all set to air on Wednesday, May 1. But there seems to be a split decision over just what to call this bout. Originally, it was "Boom Boom," then "Boom Boom Mancini," then "In the Name of My Father," which begat (Round 4) "I Walk in Your Shadow" and (Round 5) "A Champion's Edge." Now, as we go to press, CBS is back to "Boom Boom Mancini." Is this the winner? Don't bet on it.

AUTHOR, AUTHOR!

Thank you for the attention that your magazine gave my A.D. production. In reviewing A.D. ["Views and Previews," March 30], Stanley Marcus finds it not difficult to arrive at a random guess of how the writing of the screenplay was divided between Anthony Burgess and myself. Since he likes the "togaed" parts of the film, with a special mention for the excellent Colleen Dewhurst (Antonia), I wish to inform him that her part as well as the whole episode of Sejanus and his treacherous plot (with other sequences of the "wicked") were written by me. For the rest, my collaboration with Anthony Burgess, friend and master, has been—once more—harmonious.

ADS NAUSEAM

We consumers need more than adman David Ogilvy, who at least speaks out against obnoxious commercials ["David Ogilvy: The Day I Almost Created a TV Scandal," March 16]. There should be restrictions to rid commercials of loud background music, screaming car salesmen, and little kids being manipulated to sell a product. Soft sell is the answer—not the pitchman-at-the-county-fair approach. Silent commercials would be even better.

H. Allen Haas
Cornelius, Ore.

In response to David Ogilvy's statement about the "overflow" of advertisements on American TV—"Why the Great American Public holds still for it, I don't know"—many of us would ask, "Exactly what, if anything, can we do?" Having to listen to so many repetitious and disgusting onslaughts has caused me to restrict my TV viewing to three hours a day. And I don't hold still for the commercials—I squirm a lot.

BLACK IS BEAUTIFUL

I am one black woman who is extremely proud of Diahann Carroll and her character on Dynasty. Dominique Deveraux ["A New Life on Dynasty: The Rise and Fall—and Rise Again—of Diahann Carroll," March 23]. I would like to thank Aaron Spelling and company for putting a black character on Dynasty who has just as much—maybe even more—money, intelligence, beauty and class as Alexis and Krystle. Maybe the other primetime soaps will follow Dynasty's lead and put more black people on in prominent roles.

Carol Yvette Cooper
Cedar Falls, Iowa

I find television's lack of interracial relationships, particularly romances, disturbing. For a medium that is supposed to be progressive, television has a long way to go to dispel its "separate-but-equal" mentality. I applaud Dynasty for taking a step toward that end, and I hope Dominique's next love interest is chosen for the right "chemistry," not skin color.

Paula J. Weston
Providence, R.I.

GOOD NEIGHBOR

Thank you for that insightful article on Fred Rogers ["'He Reaches into Kids' Souls'," March 23]. My little boys watch him on Mister Rogers' Neighborhood twice a day and are enthralled by every word he has to say. My 3-year-old will tell Mr. Rogers things he won't tell me. My 7-month-old naps to the sound of his voice. Mr. Rogers is a legend, an institution, the creator of numerous characters that simplify a complex world for children. Most important, he is a good man, and that is just what television needs—a few good men.

Four programs in the upcoming week show us the greatness of television and, in one viewer at least, prompt a utopian thought: oh, what this medium could be if the whole were equal to some of its parts!

Because of scheduling overlaps, you probably won't be able to catch all four of these gems, and indeed you might not be interested in all of them, since they cover the waterfront, from a TV honors ceremony to a Bach retrospective. But one program should not, must not, cannot be missed: Wednesday's 20/20 special report on the Ethiopian famine, "Try to Make a Miracle."

In the context of massive human tragedy, to speak of a journalistic "coup" borders on the crass, yet there is no question that 20/20 producers have captured a story in a million—a story, moreover, that promises to reverberate among the starving of Africa as powerfully as "We Are the World."

Earlier this year, the school kids of New York City initiated a fund-raising drive, "Children for Children," whose goal was to send a planeload of grain to Ethiopia. They circulated collection boxes in their classrooms, mounted stage shows, entertained travelers at John F. Kennedy Airport, and generated some $150,000 in donations. Within a month, their life-bringing jet was on its way to Addis Ababa.

"Try to Make a Miracle" takes us into several of the schools that participated in this project, one of them located in an impoverished section of New York's Lower East Side. Children as young as 8 and teen-agers in senior grades share their feelings about the suffering they have seen in news pictures from the other side of the world. Those images of wholesale, preventable death have shaken them out of their childhood and awakened an overwhelming sense of responsibility for the afflicted. When they are shown a film report by Tom Jarriel from villages that have received their gifts of food, they are speechless with joy and pride. There's many a viewer of this program who will be speechless along with them.

As we were saying, the greatness of television . . . Last year, The Television Academy Hall of Fame inducted its first seven honorees, and on March 24 another seven were added to the pantheon: Carol Burnett, Sid Caesar, Walter Cronkite, former NBC chairman Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver Jr., Ed Sullivan, Rod Serling and Joyce Hall, first sponsor of the Hallmark Hall of Fame drama specials.

Producers Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion have given the industry a celebration it can be proud of—glamorous yet refreshingly free of glitz, dignified, warm and (unlike the Oscars) scripted with an ear for substance. Amid a sea of stars, the sensation of the evening turns out to be an obscure relative of Cronkite's, but to say any more about that would spoil the fun. (Cronkite him-

THIS WEEK'S MOVIES

BROADCAST:

|---|---|---|---|
| Sun., ABC | Embassy | Wed., CBS | Sunset Limousine |
| Mon., ABC | Marathon Man | Fri., CBS | Arthur the King |
| | | SHO | Trenchcoat |

This is a bit of a star-glitter network-movie week even though it's the lull before another sweeps-month storm.

Malcolm McDowell, Candice Bergen and Edward Woodward star in Arthur the King, wherein Dyan Cannon, a sort of latter-day American Alice in Wonderland, falls through a hole while touring Stonehenge and rediscovers Camelot in as silly a framework as a writer could devise for a new exploration of the Round Table mythology. Once it gets going, however, with the teleplay by J. David Wyles directed by Clive Donner, this re-creation of bits and pieces of Arthurian legendry isn't all that bad, even though the movie itself has been kept on the shelf since 1982.

The brightest moments come from Bergen's Morgan le Fay, Arthur's "fairy" sister complete with red fright wig and crow-feathered cape, who's plotting to put Mordred, Arthur's nephew and/or illegitimate son, on the throne. McDowell does well as the king torn 'twixt wife and kingdom, as do Woodward as Merlin and lovely Lucy Gutteridge as his beloved Niniane. The dullest moments come from Rosalyn Landor's liberation-minded Guinevere and Rupert Everett's slack-jawed Lancelot. And the funniest comes from Liam Neeson's Grak, King of the Picts, who kidnaps Guinevere, vowing that "I will make many babies with her."

A second TV-movie, Embassy, set in Rome, was unavailable for preview.

The week's one theatrical film is John Schlesinger's 1976 Marathon Man, a first-class thriller by William Goldman on its third run, offering Dustin Hoffman as a graduate student fighting the demons of a childhood tragedy through his daily workouts as a long-distance runner. The exercise turns into a metaphor for endurance and tolerance of pain as he becomes enmeshed in the affairs of his brother, a double agent, and finally confronts the White Angel of Auschwitz, played with blood-chilling evil by Laurence Olivier.

Two TV-movies are on their second runs. 1982's Games Mother Never Taught You is one of the better explorations of a woman making it in the corporate world and facing the career-versus-marriage crisis. Loretta Swit is dandy as the heroine who turns shark and David Spielberg's fine as the company sleaze. 1983's Sunset Limousine is pleasing fluff, with John Ritter just fine as an aspiring comic whose chauffeuring chores embroil him in a variety of situations.

ON CABLE

The newcomer to note this week is 1983's Trenchcoat, a very pleasing little comedy-thriller. Margot Kidder is delightful as a would-be novelist turned Sam Spade-type gumshoe when a holiday in Malta gets her involved in various intrigues. Robert Hays is the romantic interest and a charmer as well.

In some areas broadcast movies may not be seen on the days indicated. For times of cable movies, see program listings and Pay-TV Movie Guide.

self can also be seen in CBS Reports: "Honor, Duty and a War Called Vietnam," in which he returns to battlefields from which he reported a decade and more ago. Back home, he reviews the experience of Vietnam with the men who fought there.)

The two other standouts of the week are on PBS. In The Well-Tempered Bach, Peter Ustinov recounts the life story of the prodigious Johann Sebastian—whose 300th anniversary is currently being celebrated—and introduces sterling performances of his instrumental, orchestral and choral works; there's even a sprightly badinerie, performed on a bicycle pump. And in American Playhouse, a short story by F. Scott Fitzgerald ("Myra Meets His Family") is superbly dramatized as "Under the Biltmore Clock." Fitzgerald's crafty plot revolves around a flirtatious 1920s socialite (Sean Young) who falls for a young man of unusually ample means (Lenny Von Dohlen). However, when she is invited to the family mansion to meet the folks, she finds a menage of certifiable fruitcakes . . . .

In the sports department, basketball fans should note the beginning of CBS's NBA Playoff coverage. It will likely run into the middle of June.

Well, that is the week that is, except for That Was the Week That Was. David Frost, the original enfant terrible of 1960s political satire, is back with a one-hour "TW3" special in which he will once again turn his guns on the more risible activities of our respected leaders. "It's rather a good time for it," he says, "because people not only want a bit of irreverence, but they can also afford it—they know that the republic is not going to come tumbling down." In 1964, he states, that wasn't so true.

Is he worried about how far he'll be allowed to go? No. But when he was asked that question, he hadn't yet begun "what I am sure will be an entertaining gavotte with Standards and Practices" (the network censors).

Top TV Star Reveals . . .

How To Look 10-Years Younger Without A Face-Lift!

Leslie Charleson From GENERAL HOSPITAL Tells About Her Amazing Discovery!

TURN PAGE FOR DETAILS

The Amazing "Magic Mud" Used By A Top TV Star Who Doesn't Believe In Plastic Surgery!

Would you like to remove 10-years off your looks without having a facelift?

If so, here is something amazing you should know about. It was discovered by top TV star Leslie Charleson who plays Dr. Monica Quartermaine on "GENERAL HOSPITAL." Leslie has been on this #1 daytime television show for almost seven years and, believe it or not, she looks younger now than she did when she started.

A Miracle Discovery

Why? The answer is simple. First of all, Leslie takes very good care of herself and, secondly, she has made what some Hollywood insiders are calling a "miracle discovery." She made this discovery while working with Bio-Search International (a top cosmetic research lab) and, for the last several weeks, all the stars in Hollywood are going absolutely crazy trying to get some of what they are calling Leslie's "Magic Mud."

And, it's no wonder. Hollywood and TV stars are getting sick and tired of plastic surgery. After all, plastic surgery is very expensive and often it can be quite painful. Not only that, sometimes it can go bad.

"Who needs it anyway?" says Leslie. "In my opinion, any woman who uses my new product and stays excited about her life can be a timeless beauty even when she is 90 years old!"

An Amazing Substance

Why does this new product work so well? One of the reasons is explained in the #1 best-selling book called "Life Extension," written by Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw. The New York Times says, "It's the fountain of youth!" And, what's more, the authors reveal that an amazing substance called Na-PCA is the key to improving the appearance and texture of your skin.

Most people think that putting oil on their skin is what keeps it moisturized but, as "Life Extension" explains, it's the Na-PCA that makes your skin soft and flexible.

Na-PCA is a natural chemical found in the skin (we lose it as we age) and it works just like a moisture magnet. In fact, it is so effective that only a few drops of this compound has the power to attract a puddle of water even in the middle of the Desert!

Try It For 30-Days FREE!

There is no doubt about it. Na-PCA is, in fac the secret to keeping your skin soft and young. Ye it's true. It actually has enough pulling power draw moisture right out of the air and it's no wo

"It's the fountain of youth!"

der Leslie's new product works so well. You se Leslie's so called "Magic Mud" contains the ma timum amount of Na-PCA allowed in any skin ca formula.

Easy To Use

"It is also very easy to use," says Leslie. "All yo have to do is apply it gently to your face and rela for about 20 minutes. Then, after that, you rins it off with a warm wash cloth and that's all ther is to it."

But the best thing of all according to everybod who uses this product, is how it makes you look y young so fast!

In fact, sometimes the results are hard to believ Some people say they can hardly believe their ey when they look in the mirror. This product does all. It lifts, it firms, it tightens, it tones and it eve deep cleanses. And that's not all. It is 100% fr grance-free, it's allergy tested and it's so safe yo can even use it around your eyes.

All in all, it really is like a miracle. The ama ing thing, of course, is the speed at which this pro uct works.

After all, it is rather remarkable to look up 10-years younger in just 20 minutes and, with little effort.

Now here is another interesting fact: Did yo know that over 8 million people watch "GENERA HOSPITAL" every single day? It's true. And all those people have their eyes on Leslie Charleso and that's why Leslie refuses to go on camera unless she has used "Magic Mud" the night before!

Would you like to look as much as 10-years younger without the scars and expense of having a facelift? If so, here's how you can try Leslie Charleson's amazing discovery in the privacy of your own home without any risk at all.

30-Day Free Trial

In fact, this product is so effective that Leslie will let you try it on what amounts to a 30-day free trial. Here is the way it works: All you have to do is place your order now and use the entire supply according to the simple instructions. Then, if you are not 100% satisfied with the remarkable change you will see in your mirror, just return the empty product container within 30-days and Leslie Charleson will send back your original check or money order.

It's a fact. The results of this product are so dramatic that Leslie has decided to hold all checks and money orders for an entire month before she turns them over to her bank for deposit. This, of course, let's you test this product without any risk at all and, if you are at all skeptical, you can even postdate your check or money order a full 30-days ahead.

You can't lose money. This is a "no excuse" product and, quite frankly, the only thing you can lose is years and years off your appearance!

By the way, you can also order by MasterCard or Visa and, if you do, you still get the same deal because your purchase will not be turned in for the same 30-day period.

It is easy to order. All you have to do is fill out the coupon below and send it with your payment to Leslie Charleson c/o The Beverly Hills Beauty Factory. Or, if you prefer, credit card orders can be handled by phone. Just dial 1-800-522-1500 and ask for "extension 500" and tell the girl who answers where to send your order. (This is a toll-free number and it won't cost you a penny.)

That's all there is to it. Either way, your package will be sent promptly by return mail and it will arrive in a few days. Thank you.

This is Leslie Charleson, also known by millions as Dr. Monica Quartermaine on ABC TV's GENERAL HOSPITAL. As you might imagine, Leslie is one woman who has to look good and that is why she worked so hard to develop the remarkable product described on this page!

REAR WINDOW

It's a hot New York summer, and magazine photographer L.B. Jeffries (James Stewart) is confined to his Greenwich Village apartment with a broken leg. Idleness has prompted Jeffries to spend his time looking out the window at neighbors he's come to know only as Miss Torso and Miss Lonely Hearts. He's also intrigued by the goings-on in the Thorwald apartment—actions so suspicious that Jeffries becomes obsessed with the notion that a murder has been committed.

Alfred Hitchcock's 1954 suspense drama was re-released to the theaters in 1983 after settlement of a legal dispute initiated by the estate of Cornell Woolrich, whose short story was the basis for John Michael Hayes' Oscar-nominated screenplay. Hitchcock creates an unusual technical and stylistic structure. To get a feeling of helplessness and tension, his camera stays almost exclusively in Jeffries' room, and the neighbors are all seen from his window vantage point.

Lisa Freemont: Grace Kelly. Thomas J. Doyle: Wendell Corey. Stella: Thelma Ritter. Lars Thorwald: Raymond Burr. (1 hr., 55 min.)

Join by May 18, 1985 and get a FREE bookmark.

HERE'S HOW THE CLUB PLAN WORKS:

You'll get seven books for only 99¢ (plus shipping and handling) when accepted as a member. We reserve the right to reject any application. However, once accepted, if you are not completely satisfied with your introductory books return them within 10 days at our expense to cancel your membership and owe nothing.

Club Magazine: You'll receive the free Club Magazine about every four weeks (13 times a year) describing Club Selections and over 125 Alternates—at savings up to 50% off publishers' edition prices. The Featured Selection may sometimes be two books offered at a single low price. The Extra-Value Selection always saves you up to 60% off the publishers' edition prices. In addition, up to four times a year, you may receive offers of special selections. A shipping and handling charge is added to all shipments. If you want both the Featured and Extra-Value Selections, do nothing—they'll be shipped automatically. If you'd prefer an Alternate or no book at all, indicate this on the reply form and return it by the date specified. You'll have at least 10 days to decide.

Return Privileges: If you get an unwanted selection because you had less than 10 days to decide, return it at Club expense and owe nothing.

Club Advantage: Our books, selected from all publishers, are complete hardbound editions sometimes altered in size to fit special presses and save you even more.

Your Commitment: You need buy just six books (at regular low Club prices), within one year, after which you may continue to enjoy Club benefits or cancel at any time. Your adherence to this membership agreement is crucial to our ability to provide you with a large selection of books at money-saving prices.

5 Million Americans Suffer From A Disease They Don't Even Know Exists.

Food addiction. The experts call it Bulimia and Bulimarexia.

The symptoms are simple enough. You can't stop eating. You think about food all the time.

You go on eating binges. You may also throw up, take handfuls of laxatives, starve yourself, or exercise until exhaustion to get rid of the calories.

Stop blaming yourself. No one can cure Bulimia and Bulimarexia by themselves.

Willpower is not the solution. Pills won't help. Dieting only makes it worse. Even therapy isn't always successful.

You need an intensive program that treats the whole problem. Physically, emotionally, spiritually, socially, and psychologically.

You need to break the pattern that's causing the problem and develop new living skills that will put you on the road to recovery.

Ours is the nation's leading Eating Disorders Program. Call us.

We know what you're going through.

KUDOS FOR SOME TV VIPS

President Reagan joins in a tribute to seven TV giants.

They are Carol Burnett, Sid Caesar, Walter Cronkite, Joyce Hall (of "Hallmark Hall of Fame" fame), Rod Serling, Ed Sullivan and pioneer programmer Sylvester L. (Pat) Weaver Jr. They have made, says co-host Bryant Gumbel, "rare and special contributions to the video age." And so they are honored in this second annual induction ceremony.

Joining Gumbel and President Reagan in offering warm words . . . Woody Allen, Lucille Ball, Mel Brooks, Imogene Coca, Julie Harris, Alan King, Itzhak Perlman, Carl Reiner, John Ritter, Tom Selleck, Neil Simon, Robert Stack and Mike Wallace.

There are also clips and biographical sketches. In addition . . . Bobby Berosini and his orangutans—an act featured on Sullivan's show back in 1969—are "right here on our stage tonight." And there's a tribute to "Our Friend, Carol," sung by an ensemble featuring Tim Conway, Harvey Korman, Vicki Lawrence, Garry Moore, Dinah Shore, Beverly Sills and Paul Winchell (with Jerry Mahoney). # SYNOMETRICS PLAN...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Lose Belly Fat Develop a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

IN JUST 7 SHORT MINUTES A DAY with the "miracle" we call SYNOMETRICS (scientific concept of ISOMETRIC + ISOTONIC) ...the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping...to reveal a trim handsome body!

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes

- Olympic Gold medal winner
- World Champion (3 times)
- National Champion (12 times)
- Undefeated in competition against the Soviet Union

SAVE $3.00! THOUSANDS SOLD for $9.95

Special Offer NOW ONLY $6.95

"...I'm over 50... and results (with Synometrics) came so fast I had to cut my daily 7 minute workout to 5 minutes. It's the most amazing method I've ever tried ... and I've tried just about every gadget and gimmick I've seen in magazines and TV." HY HARRIS, N.Y.

In addition to reshaping and toning your body, a FREE accompanying easy to follow diet plan will help speed up weight loss, if weight loss is one of your objectives, to speed away ugly, embarrassing fat & flab.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS

You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercising to only a fraction of the time previously needed!

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's what it is... a speed method to give you results minutes, NOT hours! Now... build yourself a "fanta looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS-t invention that works on the exciting new scientific concep of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results... or your money back promptly and without any question.

EMP Sales Co., Inc., 535-5th Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10017

Send Today For Speed Shaper Kit, only $6.95

EMP Sales Co., Inc., Dept. RS-6215
535 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10017

If the SYNOMETRIC plan can really start shaping me up in just days, and I mean ALL over (stomach, waist, chest, arms and legs), I will keep it and use it... otherwise, I will want a full refund. Rush SPEED SHAPER to me.

WELL-TEMPERED BACH
WITH PETER USTINOV
8 PM 22 KET

A 300th BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Renowned for almost two centuries as a composer of unrivaled brilliance, versatility and productivity, Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750) was recognized in his day merely as a superb organist. Even Bach, says host Peter Ustinov, was unaware of his exceptional gifts. Indeed, the composer used to say that anyone who worked as hard as he did would achieve the same results.

Ustinov narrates this examination of Bach's life and music, which commemorates the 300th anniversary of the German genius's birth. The retrospective shows Bach to be a devoted family man, willful court composer and stern schoolmaster. It also traces his influence on great musicians, from Mendelssohn, who saved him from obscurity 80 years after his death, to contemporary writers and performers.

The bulk of the program, however, is given over to music (played on baroque instruments), which includes some of Bach's most celebrated works: the Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, the Violin Concerto in E Major, the Piano Partita in D Major, the Toccata and Fugue in D Minor for Organ, and excerpts from the St. Matthew Passion. (2 hrs.)

New York public-school students raise their voices to aid the victims of Ethiopia's famine

TRY TO MAKE A MIRACLE

In mid-January 1985, 917 New York City public schools began Children for Children, a drive to raise money to send a plane filled with grain to Ethiopia. The kids put on talent shows, held bake sales and raffles and raised some $150,000 to feed people totally dependent on the world's generosity.

"It's not right for them to starve when we have so much," says one of the youngsters interviewed on this report. Yet many of the students who took part in the campaign don't have "so much" themselves. Some come from families living on welfare in the city's poorest neighborhoods.

Through their efforts, on Feb. 14, a plane carrying 40 tons of food and supplies landed in Addis Ababa. Correspondent Tom Jarriel is seen accompanying that grain to a distribution center in a remote area of the country, where the skeletal bodies of Ethiopian children provide heartbreaking evidence of the prolonged drought's devastating effects. Back in New York, some of the youngsters, seen viewing films of Jarriel's journey, see their money at work. They're proud, but they also know that there is so much more to be done. (60 min.)

HONOR, DUTY AND A WAR CALLED VIETNAM

Cronkite in Hanoi: the "way it is" 10 years later

CBS REPORTS
9 PM 5

Ten years after the fall of Saigon, Vietnam veterans reflect on their experiences fighting a war that divided the Nation.

"Our interest," says producer Brian Ellis, who served as CBS News bureau chief in Saigon from 1972 to 1975, "was in getting the reaction of the guys we asked to go there and fight this war—the grunts, the POWs, a mixed bag of Marines, Army, Air Force. The war was different for each of them; some fought on the ground, others spent five or six years in prison camps."

While the veterans at home review their perceptions about their role and how they performed it, correspondent Walter Cronkite revisits sites of major battles. Cronkite also accompanies Rep. John McCain (R-Ariz.) back to Hanoi, where McCain spent more than five years as a POW. There, the Arizona representative discusses the difficulty of being imprisoned and not knowing what was going on in the rest of the war.

The hour (which was still being edited at press time) also includes interviews with a North Vietnamese general; a former Army colonel who was a POW for some nine years; and a Marine lieutenant (the son of legendary Marine general Lewis "Chesty" Puller) who lost both of his legs after stepping on a mine. (60 min.)

Cliff (John Ratzenberger) transforms himself into a lady's man, and Frasier tells Diane (Shelley Long) to take Sam to a concert that Frasier's unable to attend. Tinker Bell, Bernadette Birkett, Sam, Ted Danson. (Repeat)

ARTHUR THE KING

A handsome re-creation of Camelot.

This film opens, though, in the 20th century, at Stonehenge, the monument of megaliths on England's Salisbury Plain that, legend has it, was transported from Ireland on a whirlwind by the wizard Merlin. Drawn into that legend (literally) is a tourist (Dyan Cannon), who trips, falls into a hole in the ground—and lands in an icy cavern in the company of Merlin (Edward Woodward) and his lover Niniane (Lucy Gutteridge).

Together, they recall . . . the heroic King Arthur (Malcolm McDowell), holding sway over the knights of the Round Table. Arthur's treacherous half-sister Morgan Le Fay (Candice Bergen), who uses evil magic in an attempt to seize power; and the stalwart Lancelot (Rupert Everett), who romances Arthur's queen Guinevere (Rosalyn Landor)—and falls from Arthur's graces.

Director Clive Donner ("A Christmas Carol") filmed this 1985 TV-movie in 1983. Gawain: Patrick Ryecart. Mordred: Joseph Blatchley. Lady Ragnell: Ann Thornton. Agravain: Philip Sayer. Grak: Liam Neeson. (3 hrs.)

The Eyes of Texas Are Upon Her

Comely Deborah Shelton has perked up Dallas plot lines; now she's trying to sharpen her acting skills

By Tom Nolan

There are those who argue that glamour in Hollywood is dead, but they are people who haven't seen Deborah Shelton in action. Shelton is a glamour girl in the true sense of the word; she's the essence of glamour. It's rewarding—especially for someone not loaded with talent—but it exacts a price.

Wearing an expensive red dress by designer Holly Harp, Shelton is reclining on a turquoise backdrop in a photographer's studio in Culver City. One knee is raised. Her head is thrown back—then she moves it forward in sensuous slow-motion. Now she lies on her side, teasing a strand of hair provocatively, as a director moves in tight with a handheld video camera.

"Arm on hip! Arm on hip!" says the director. "Smile! Profile! Profile!" The video camera feeds its image to a monitor a few feet away, where Shelton's sinuous form stretches, catlike, on the screen. As the director inches closer, the screen is filled with her smiling face, her enormous green eyes. "Hand in hair now!" commands the director. "Big laugh now, right in the camera! That's great! Terrific!"

A moment later, Shelton stands and strides to a table spread with delicatessen food. Fixing herself a bagel with cream cheese, she whispers in the ear of a visitor, "Tell the truth: aren't you bored to tears?" After her first bite of bagel, she says, "I had my workout this morning and I always feel so virtuous afterward that I think I can cheat a little. The only problem is, I'm going to have all these poppy seeds in my teeth."

One is tempted to think she's kidding, but glamour girls seldom joke about teeth: they've got too much invested in them. But they do joke. Gesturing at her elegant dress, with its hand-sewn $300 belt, Shelton asks her public-relations man, "Do you think I could do a cover for Ladies' Home Journal now? Or Woman's Day, maybe?"

"Yes!" says the PR man, going along with the gag. "In that dress—holding a colander!"

The 32-year-old actress, who joined CBS's Dallas troupe last October, is at a point in her career where she's giving a certain amount of thought to image. In fact, she is in this barnlike studio today for a celebrity fashion special to be shown on superstation WTBS. The program's director is photographer Dick Zimmerman, who says of Shelton, "She has a real movie-actress look, a quality look. . . . I mean, did you see her light up during that segment? She's gonna be a big star." →

There's no doubt she wants to be. She discusses it a few days later in a restaurant on the Sunset Strip. The dress, the makeup and the veneer of glamour are gone, but she still looks sensational in jeans and a blue sweater. "I think I'm directable," she says. "I'm not the greatest actress, but I have potential. I need someone to help me bring it into form."

Most recently that someone was Brian De Palma, the director in whose movie "Body Double" Shelton played a leading role. (Can it be mere chance that above the restaurant chosen for today's meeting towers an enormous billboard advertising this film?) "Body Double" was blasted by women's groups for its violence, including a scene in which Shelton's character is killed off with an electric drill.

Shelton seems unfazed by the criticism. "Whatever the opinions, it was good for me to do that film," she says. "I wasn't trying to make a social statement. I shouldn't say I don't care what the general public thinks, but I'm not trying to chalk up Brownie points. I want to work and I want to get better parts, meatier parts."

Nevertheless, she admits she had her disagreements with De Palma. "I fought with Brian all the time. I'd say, 'This is crazy, why wouldn't I just hit this guy?' But it's his film, he's the director. I'm not there to argue with him. I mean, I did argue with him, but . . ." Then she laughs and says, "What does he care?"

It was shortly after completing "Body Double" that Shelton was cast as Mandy Winger in Dallas. "She's really a fun girl," Shelton says of her character. "Laughs a lot, really in control of her life, not somebody's pet. I'm not all soft, but I'm not a bitch. I'm not black or white; I'm kind of a light gray."

But acting, even if her character is "light gray," is still a far cry from her Southern upbringing in Norfolk, Va., where she was coaxed by a family of professional people toward a career in medicine. "In Virginia, acting is not something people who are OK in the head grow up to think about. 'What do you mean you want to study drama? That's for stupid kids.' So I took science and math; but I was always dancing, acting, singing, writing crazy stories."

At least her exit from Virginia was dramatic enough: she won the 1970 Miss USA pageant. In New York, she studied acting and was successful in television commercials. In Hollywood, the parts came slowly but surely: a TV-movie ("real t & a") set in Hawaii; four episodes of an Andy Griffith series called The Yeagers. "And then I was 'The Girl' on every show coming and going." A stint on NBC's short-lived The Yellow Rose preceded her Dallas deal.

Her colleagues on Dallas seem principally impressed by her beauty. Says Ken Kercheval, who plays Cliff Barnes, "When she first appeared on the set, we were kind of overwhelmed, 'cause she's such a pretty lady." Executive producer Philip Capice explains that her character was conceived as someone so beautiful that "bells would go off for J.R. the first time he sees this woman." Her involvement in the Dallas plot is a major one, Capice says. "She has assumed the role of J.R.'s lady and will continue to be that—with some interesting complications." Starting in May, Shelton also will have a major part in introducing the Southfork Dallas clothing and perfume collection. Of Shelton herself, Capice says, "She is kind, sweet and anxious to learn. She is not yet a thoroughly accomplished actress, but she responds well to direction."

With a steady job on a hit show, Shelton, kind and sweet though she may be, seems to have it made. She credits her eight-year marriage to Israeli composer Shuki Levy with helping her through the ups and downs of her acting career. "He doesn't interfere, but he supports and pushes. When I'm at my lowest, feeling like a failure, he's lifting me up."

Shelton, in fact, has a thriving second career as her husband's lyricist, providing English words to the pop tunes and TV themes he produces for American and European consumption. Such a creative outlet, says this mother of two, is essential to her in times when she's not acting. "Otherwise I become sarcastic toward → that whole domestic role: 'Oh, so what am I now, the Mommy Robot?'"

Nevertheless, there are the inevitable conflicts. Shelton confesses, "Sometimes I feel I'm not doing anything well. Do you give a little more time to studying your script that night, or do you spend the time cuddling your 3-year-old? Whichever way you go, you're going to feel a little guilty." But, she concludes, "There is time for everything."

So determined is she in pursuit of both career and family, she continued to go on interviews while nine months pregnant. "It's hard for them to imagine you doing a love scene when you're in that condition, but I'd say, 'This will all be over soon'." And she reports proudly: "I had my little girl on a Saturday, interviewed on Tuesday for Spelling-Goldberg—and on Friday I was shooting a pilot."

It is early evening and Shelton, wearing a purple sweat suit, is standing next to the mixing console in the engineer's booth of her husband's recording studio in the San Fernando Valley. She and her husband are listening to the playback of a vocal track made by a female singer being considered for backup work on a Levy/Shelton pop song.

Levy, a tall, bearded man with a slight accent, says of the song, "It's very European, I think. Melodramatic."

The tune is bouncy and catchy in Abba-esque fashion, with well made lyrics by Shelton. Most of her assignments are for Levy's Saturday morning cartoon-show chores. "Those you whip out like fast-food: 'We need one Get Along Gang, two Heathcliff songs and three Going Bananas this week, so the producers can decide which ones they want to use.' See, one person will want a song with no characters' names mentioned at all—and somebody else will want it to have everybody's name and The Happy Caboose!"

"Yes," Levy jokes of his wife, "she's the fastest in lyrics—if you notify her three years in advance. No, she does a great job. But she used to be faster."

"That's because I was sitting in Paris [where they lived for a year] with my finger in my ear and nothing else to do," his wife says right back.

The couple met in 1976 in New York, and Levy says he always felt his bride belonged "on the big screen—or, if on television, on something like Dallas for sure." So he is pleased with her career progress, to a point.

"Still, she has always been acting," Levy says. "She acted for Brian De Palma, she acts on Dallas. I'd love to see her doing a movie where she's really herself. I think she can surprise a lot of people with what she can do. I'd like one time for her not to be working with directors in television, where you have to rush and you have to look beautiful and all of that."

Levy hastens to make clear that "I'm not what's-his-name—[John] Derek!" But he and his partner, Haim Saban, have begun looking for TV and movie properties they can produce for Shelton. Levy says he would like to help guide her into a project that would let her be "natural." And he adds, "There's another side, too, that she doesn't show. She could be a Goldie Hawn, and nobody knows that. She could be very funny."

"Yes," says Shelton, smiling at her husband. "He laughs at me all the time."

Shelton can light up the camera for a TV fashion special; she can make Ken Kercheval's eyes pop out; she can make her husband laugh. And she has other abilities, too. Her PR man is telling her about an upcoming audition for a part in a remake of "King Solomon's Mines," (a part she ultimately doesn't take because it conflicts with Dallas's shooting schedule). "It's perfect," he says, "because it would get you out of the mold of 'The Girl' and into a whole adventure thing. But be sure and emphasize the athletics, the workouts and so forth, 'cause it's gonna be shot on location in Africa, and they want somebody who can run up a hill."

"Well, I can do that," says Deborah Shelton. END

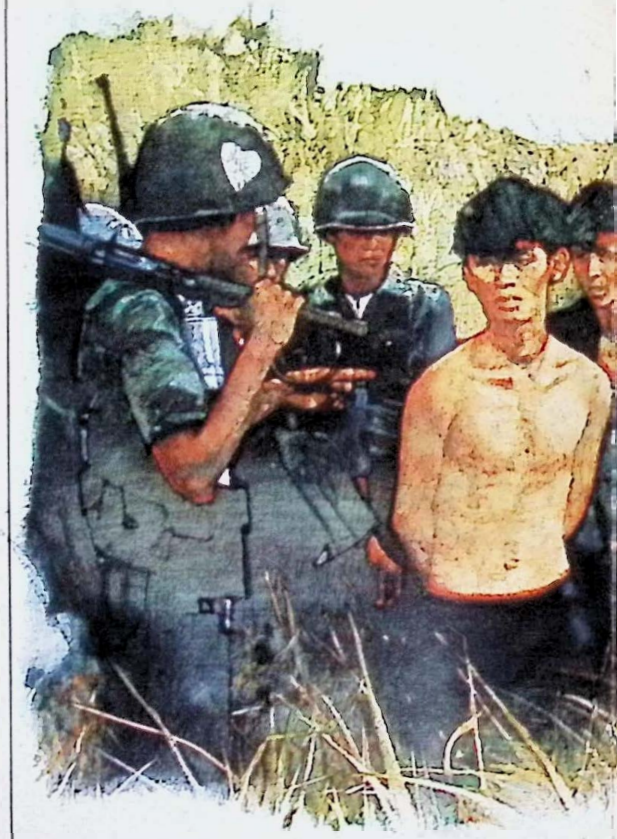
Medals—and Demerits—for Performance Under Fire



Television vividly brought the horrors of war to American living rooms, but failed at times to see the meaning behind the images

By David Halberstam

CBS and NBC are both scheduling specials to mark the 10th anniversary of the fall of Saigon. "Honor, Duty and a War Called Vietnam," a CBS Reports, is slated for Thursday, April 25, at 10 P.M. (ET), and "The Unwinnable War," an NBC White Paper, is expected to air on Saturday, April 27, at 10 P.M. (ET). See local listings for times and channels in your area.

The helicopters are gone 10 years now. They were the most familiar sight of the war, whirring across the paddies, their machine guns firing, their blades stirring up the water and bending the foliage, the troops bent over as they departed and scurried into the rice fields. It was America's first television war, shown in vivid color, and if that did not define the nature of the war, it defined the nature of future network news. TV critic Michael Arlen called it the "Living Room War," the best description I know of for both the war and the television coverage. It had action, violence, chases, good guys, bad guys. In the end, like many television series which on occasion it seemed to resemble, it simply wore out its welcome. It had played too long. It had begun to bore.

Yet 10 years later many of the images remain as-tonishingly vivid: CBS's Morley Safer at Cam Ne reporting as Marines set fire to peasant huts, Safer legitimizing for reporters in television as well as for those in print the right to confront the American people with what they most desperately preferred not to see; Jack Laurence, also then of CBS, reporting on Charlie Company, the frailty of whose young men was so obvious (had Americans ever before seen how young and vulnerable their fighting men look?); Phil Brady, then of NBC, covering the aborted excursion of the South Vietnamese army into Laos, and the shambles of its retreat, saying despite all the inflated bombast of the Public Information Officers, "This is a defeated army"; Walter Cronkite of CBS going to Vietnam in 1968 after the Tet Offensive, donning a flak jacket and letting the Nation know that he did not think the war winnable—the first time in American history that a war had been declared over by an anchorman.

The bravery of those television correspondents and their cameramen and sound men was of the highest order. I doubt that in any previous war any group of American journalists ever took so many risks; those of us in print watched them with awe. We, after all, took some risks, but we did not have to be at the scene all the time, for we could always piece together a battle → by talking to survivors. But the television people had to be witnesses. Since the institution they worked for loved pictures, and Vietnam was regularly producing the best pictures in the journalistic world, the war and network television had a magnetic attraction to each other. I think the television reporting was very good—on occasion, with men like Safer and Laurence, simply dazzling—but it was not necessarily thoughtful. There was too little time for that, and too much action.

Never, I think, had the axiom that separates the best of print journalism from the best of television journalism—to wit, in television a relatively weak story with good film will always beat out a relatively good story with weak film—been so true. It was the bane of my broadcast colleagues' existence. They would want to do a thoughtful social and political story, but the machinery of the network wanted action film, "Bloody" or "Bang Bang" as it became known. A CBS correspondent would plead with his desk for the right to do a particularly complicated piece, would finally get permission, would go out in the field, and on that day there would be a firefight, and the other network would cover it, and NBC would have the film. That which was complex became, in the process, infinitely simplified.

It was later said, by a disgruntled Lyndon Johnson among others, that the television coverage of the war cost him the war and cost him his Presidency. In that judgment, he and others significantly overestimate the role of the television correspondents and significantly underestimate the role of the Vietcong and the North Vietnamese regulars. The theory, since adopted by many conservatives, is that by covering the Tet Offensive so thoroughly, defeat was snatched out of the jaws of victory, and the American effort thereby terminally undermined. I could not disagree more. These people claim that Tet was a political defeat for the Americans, albeit a military victory. In a political war, there is no such thing as a military victory that is at the same time a political defeat. What is true about that war was that it was an endless series of military victories always undermined by cumulative political erosion. It was this particular part of the war that television reported poorly.

We always had absolute military superiority, and there was not a set-piece battle fought (to my memory at least) that we did not win. But it also made very little difference. The other side, because of the French Indochina war, had absolute political superiority. Television lacked the film to show how skillfully the Vietcong had replenished themselves, and how the North Vietnamese had forced us into a position where we could only punish or, to use the phrase then current, tax them, but could not defeat them because they controlled the rate of the war. Thus TV did not overstate the strength and resilience of the other side; it for technological reasons understated it.

Usually when there was a battle initiated by the Vietcong, it was at night and by the time the American choppers and news teams arrived, the Vietcong had disappeared. My colleague Bernie Kalb, then from CBS, used to say that there was an all-purpose can of film for that, called "The Wily Vietcong Got Away Again." That was why Tet was so important: it was the first time the American people learned how tough and formidable the other side really was.

If television failed in that sense, it gave us something else: a heightened sense of the moment. Because of television, we paid attention. We watched, and because we watched, we read; and because we read, we watched. It was the most intense and passionate time to be a citizen that I can ever remember. And in that sense, in the complicated and pluralistic circulatory system of American democracy, the networks, for all their flaws, played their part, and probably, in truth, played it brilliantly. END

Louella Parsons vs. Hedda Hopper

Liz and Jane Offer Feud for Thought

Elizabeth Taylor joins Jane Alexander for a TV-movie about two legendary Hollywood gossip columnists

By Bill Davidson

CBS's "Malice in Wonderland" is scheduled to be broadcast on Sunday, April 21, from 9 to 11 P.M. (ET). See local listings for time and channel in your area.

Television film crews in Hollywood are a blasé lot, but this particular afternoon, on the set of CBS's TV-movie "Malice in Wonderland," there was total attentiveness and a noticeable lack of yawning and scratching. The filming was being done in a vacant restaurant now masquerading as Romanoff's, where such superstars as Errol Flynn and Cary Grant had cavorted in the 1940s.

The scene was between Elizabeth Taylor and Jane Alexander, playing the once all-powerful movie columnists Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper, respectively. In their long-running feud, a face-to-face confrontation between Louella and Hedda finally is taking place. The crew gasped as the beauteous Miss Taylor (now minus 45 pounds of previous avoirdupois) and Miss Alexander walked in. The crew actually applauded when Taylor and Alexander did a four-and-a-half-minute scene without fluff or interruption—almost unheard of in television or film production today.

Almost simultaneously with the crew's applause there was an enormous clap of thunder to accent the downpour of rain that had been going on all day.

"That's Louis B. Mayer," producer Jay Benson said uneasily, referring to the late tempestuous MGM mogul, who is not dealt with too favorably in the script.

"That's Louella," said Taylor. "She's laughing it up and hollering that I should have been playing her a year ago when I was fat and frumpy—like she was."

"That's Hedda turning over in her grave," said Alexander, "because she was such a conserva- → tive and she must have just found out how liberal my politics are."

"Malice in Wonderland" was a project fraught with problems from its very beginnings. "For one thing," points out executive producer Judith Polone, "we started with a story about two women who will be unknown to about 75 per cent of today's TV audience. Hedda died in 1966 at the age of 80; Louella was in a nursing home in 1965 and finally passed away in obscurity in 1972 when she was 91. Few people remember the tremendous power these two women exercised in the totally male-dominated movie industry. Their column items and radio broadcasts could make or break stars; they could ruin movies or help them become enormous successes. And yet CBS finally recognized the strength of our story, whether Hedda and Louella were remembered or not. We had the classic plot here of two women, who, with all their weaknesses and foibles and the bitter feud between them, took on and foiled the very movie moguls who had created them in a devious plot to use the press to get free favorable publicity for their movies. It didn't hurt, of course, when we came up with Elizabeth Taylor."

I personally came to Hollywood at the tail end of the Parsons-Hopper era and got to know both women casually. Stars and studio heads really trembled then at the thought of the havoc these two semi-literates could cause when aroused or thwarted. The short plump Louella would sit at Table Number One in Romanoff's or Chasen's restaurants and would be fawned over like a queen. It was the same with the taller, more handsome ex-actress Hedda. They both did inexcusable things. Hedda lost a $100,000 lawsuit for alluding to Michael Wilding as a homosexual; she was politically so far to the right that she called super-patriot John Wayne "soft on pinkos."

Louella was an admirer of Mussolini, used racial slurs like "pickaninny," and unashamedly and almost single-handedly built up the career of Marion Davies, to the delight of her boss—and Davies' lover—William Randolph Hearst. And yet I remember that both she and Hedda occasionally were capable of excellent reporting. Louella, in particular, was brilliant when she strayed from gossip and covered some of the major crime stories of the day. For example, even when she was quite elderly for such activity, she scored exclusives with an on-the-spot description of a Bank of America robbery, and with her coverage of the Johnny Stompanato murder, for which Lana Turner's daughter, Cheryl Crane, was tried and convicted.

In 1972, when both Parsons and Hopper were dead, George Eells wrote a best-selling dual biography called "Hedda and Louella." Possibly because some of the other principals were still alive (Louella's daughter, producer Harriet Parsons, did not die until 1982, for example), the book never got off the ground as a movie property.

In 1983, it came to the attention of Judith Polone, executive vice-president of television for the British-owned production company ITC, that the film rights, which had been under option by another company, now were available again. "Within 24 hours," says Polone, "we acquired the rights and I told CBS that the story would attract two big stars because it concerned two of the most powerful women of their time. I told them it not only was about power, but it also was hysterically funny. In a very short time, we had a deal to do a script. Lauren Bacall's name was bandied about, but I told CBS I wanted Elizabeth Taylor, not knowing whether I could get her or not. I knew it would be an automatic pickup if I could."

Getting Taylor turned out to be much easier than anyone expected. "I read the script and I loved it," she told me. "I was ready for it. First of all, I don't want to do theater any more; eight shows a week is too taxing. Secondly, I had lost all that weight when I stopped drinking after having been a patient at the Betty Ford Center, and now, at 120 pounds, I looked the way I did when I was a young girl. I proved that to the TV audience when I'd done a part in the Hotel series a short time before. In the third place, I knew Hedda and Louella in the old days and I could see the comedic possibilities of their long-running feud, in which they called each other every horrible name imaginable. I had a score to settle with Hedda. When I confided in her as a friend, she blabbed the whole story in her column about my romance with Eddie Fisher. She even made up quotes I had never said or even thought, such as, 'What do you expect me to do, sleep alone?'"

Having decided that her great beauty would not get in the way of her characterization of the plain, plump Louella, ITC/CBS's next step was the additional offbeat casting of Jane Alexander as Hedda. Having consistently played heavy, unglamorous roles ("Eleanor and Franklin," "Testament," etc.), Alexander was now eager for the lighter comedic parts she had played on the stage. "Not only that," she says, "but the story really grabbed me. Here, these all-powerful movie moguls set up Louella literally to pimp publicity for them, but she turned out to be too independent for them to handle. Then they created the Hedda alternative, just because Hedda, an actress, had once supplied items to Louella in long, chatty letters. And Hedda, too, turned out to be too independent for them. Remember that these were the days when very few women did little more than type and pour coffee in the movie industry."

Except for the freak downpour weather toward the end, the production went surprisingly smoothly. On the first day, a terrified young director-trainee, Marty Elcan, was the first to enter Taylor's motor home-dressing room, not knowing what to expect. The star offered to make her a cup of coffee—and the tension relaxed for the entire crew.

Thereafter, however, it was never far from anyone's mind that even a placid Elizabeth Taylor was the center of focus in this picture. The public and the paparazzi swarmed. "I've worked with big stars like Carroll O'Connor and George C. Scott," says Leslie Ackerman (who plays Louella's daughter, Harriet), "but I've never seen anything like this. We had to do a scene in a Santa Monica street, for example, and despite all the cops and guards, thousands of people pressed around Elizabeth. It took a half hour to move her 12 feet from her trailer to the limousine in which the scene was to be shot."

Leslie Ackerman reports some hilarious conversations with Elizabeth, who specializes in telling naughty stories with a European flavor (the peccadilloes of a Swiss traveling salesman in the Alps, for example). According to Ackerman, the following revealing conversation also took place between her and Elizabeth:

ELIZABETH: You wear that parka all the time. It's become your trademark. Why don't you ask the producers to give it to you?

LESLIE: Because it's mine. But how about that fur coat you're wearing? Are you going to ask the producers to give it to you?

ELIZABETH: Of course, darling.

LESLIE: But why? You must have 20 fur coats already.

ELIZABETH: No, darling. Only about 12.

Such are the ways of Big Movie superstardom intruding into the smaller world of television. The noted dress designer Nolan Miller created Taylor's gowns; Alexander and others were clad in original designs by Adrian and Mainbocher, put together by costume designer Mina Mittleman. Some of the clothes originally were worn by such stars as Claudette Colbert and Marlene Dietrich.

So the picture definitely has "the look," as they like to say in televisionland. Will the rest of it work—notably the story?

Producer Benson shrugs. He says, "Who's not going to tune in just to see what Elizabeth Taylor looks like now—and how she can hold her own in sparring duels with Jane?"

Who can tell? Veteran cinematographer Philip Lathrop recalled the words of Fats Waller, the noted musician-philosopher of the Hedda-Louella period: "One never know, do one?" END

WHO'S THE BOSS?

By Don Merrill

"Angela clamps down when Jonathan starts picking up Tony's habits."
—Who's the Boss? listing

Johnny Carson used to do a routine that started with him reading silly storylines for situation comedies from the current issue of TV GUIDE and wound up with him reading even more ridiculous storylines contrived by his writers. He dropped the device after a while, probably because it's hard to get laughs parodying something that in itself is a parody.

Why do otherwise intelligent people watch situation comedies with absurd plots? That's easy: because the plots don't matter. Viewers tune in to see characters they like say and do funny things. No one expects sensational stories in a 23-minute show. The trick for producers is to come up with a situation that has funny possibilities and a cast that is warm and lovable—not necessarily believable, just warm and lovable.

We have in ABC's Who's the Boss? a comedy with a reasonable, if not particularly original, situation—a warm, lovable ex-jock from Brooklyn has a tomboyish daughter and takes a job as live-in housekeeper for an attractive president of an advertising agency who has a young son. Got the situation? See the possibilities?

Tony Danza, the boxer-cabbie in Taxi, plays Tony Micelli, the ex-jock. Danza is to acting what grits are to haute cuisine, but he manages to radiate warmth as efficiently—and about as subtly—as a blast furnace. Judith Light, by refusing to play the frothy role of ad-lady Angela Bower as if it were beneath her, shows how a capable and appealing actress cast as a second banana can indeed raise the enjoyment level of what otherwise would be a run-of-the mill sitcom. Katherine Helmond, the madcap Jessica Tate of Soap, is the equally madcap Mona Robinson, Angela's mother. The kids, played by Alyssa Milano and Danny Pintauro, are cute, lovable, adorable, etc. Alyssa has a habit of rolling her eyes to emphasize a punch line. Someone ought to break her of that. There's also—surprise, surprise—a raggedy dog named Grover who's pretty lovable, too.

Unfortunately, Danza's ear-to-ear grin, Light's professionalism, Helmond's zaniness and the kids' cuteness aren't quite enough to make this Tuesday-night comedy successful. The trouble is in the writing, which should be a lot sharper than Mona saying to her broker, "I don't care what E.F. Hutton says. When Mona talks, you listen." Jokes do not a sitcom make, nor warmth a Nielsen winner.

It's impossible not to like the people in Who's the Boss? and the viewer finds himself rooting for them to be as funny as the sweetened studio laughs would have you believe they are. There was hysteria unbounded after, "You know that saying, 'Into each life a little rain must fall?' Well, get out your galoshes. We're talking monsoon here." Not exactly. We're talking bad comedy writing.

And Alyssa—watch those eyes. (END)
